

Derek Riggs enters his second season with Boise River Volleyball Club, and the 2009 season will be his second working with the 18-1 team. Last year he performed duties as a head coach, and this year he will serve as an assistant to Head Coach, Candy Murphy.

Currently, Riggs is in his first season as an assistant coach with the College of Idaho women's volleyball team. While working with C of I's head coach (and former Boise River Volleyball Club coach), Liz Mendiola, the Yotes are currently tied for first place in the Cascade Collegiate Conference, and hold a 22nd ranking Nationally.

Riggs spent the 2003-05 seasons as a student assistant for the Boise State women's volleyball program. While a student at Boise State, Riggs also played on the men's club team from 2003-06. After taking a season off to complete his education, Riggs served as a volunteer assistant coach at Columbia High School in Nampa, Idaho.

A graduate of Boise State University, Riggs earned a bachelor's degree in K-12 physical education. Currently he is in his second year as a physical education teacher. Riggs a native of Baker City, Oregon came to Boise in 2002.